

Secret financial escape plan for domestic violence victims

If you're a domestic violence victim, you may still be living with your abuser for a simple reason: money.

It's common for abusers to keep victims in the dark about household finances and to limit access to bank accounts, victims' advocates say. Your abuser may force you to stay on a strict budget and account for every penny you spend. If you work, the abuser may make you turn over your paycheck immediately.

To find out what more you can do, please continue reading here.